ALL THE NEWS FROM NEARBY TOWNS

PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. TIFFIN, O., April 12.-To-day while workmen were engaged in the excavation for the Brewer pottery in the Highland addition, just north of this city, a rust-eaten iron box was unearthed. It was found buried on the limestone rock eight feet below the surface and was covered with a large flat stone.

It was broken open and found to contain a large quantity of old and rare gold and silver coin, all bearing dates prior to 1810. Most of the coins were English and Spanish, though a few were American, French and German. The box was found by a lad named Ostervolt, who will be nearly $500 richer. As the site of Fort Rall, of 1812 fame, is near where the box was found, it is thought that the money was buried by some of the oldiers or by some settlers who feared the ravages of war.

It has been arranged to have the coin displayed on the occasion of the natural gas celebration on the 15th. Many Indian relics were treatment of the raverse and the unearthed in the same excavation, and the bones of a very large animal supposed by some to have belonged to a species now extinct. The excavation will cover over two acres and new finds are expected.

Riding Master Pearson Sent to State Prison For Base Ingratitude. SPECIAL THERERAN TO THE DISPATCH.

NEW YORK, April 12.-Frank E. Pearson, a riding master of Wakefield, Mass. eloped five years ago with Mrs. Annie B. Wakefield, a pupil in his riding school wife of the late Cyrus W. Wakefield, the millionaire founder of the town and manufacturer of the Wakefield rattan furniture. Pearson was arraigned to-day before Judge Gildersleeve, in the General Sessions, to receive sentence. He was convicted recently of appropriating $500 which Mrs. Wakefield gave to him on September 27, 1888, to pay the half-yearly interest then due upon a $20,000 mortgage upon Mrs. Wakefield's houses at 349 and 351 West One Hundred and Twenty-third street. Pearson was heavy-eyed and nervous. He had sent to Judge Gildersleeve from the tombs a batch of Mrs. Wake-field's letters to him in the halycon days of "The papers that you sent me, Pearson," said Judge Gildersleeve, "satisfy me that the complainant, Mrs. Wakefield, didn't keep strictly within the line of truth in regard to some of her statements upon the witmess stand. She was, however, a very good witness in the main, and told her story in an impressive way. There is nothing in any of these papers that would justify me in giving you a new trial. In view of your former relations with the complainant, I do not feel called upon to be extremely severe.

Pearson thanked the Judge, and asked be-fore he quitted the barthat Mrs. Wakefield's letters be returned to him.
